9. On 21 March 1952, 8 x 37-mm AA guns were seen in the gun shed of the Britz Wood Camp, 4 km north of Berswalde, and 8 other 100-mm guns of the same caliber were north of the gun shed. Airing practice was performed on the latter guns. Between 60 and 70 trucks were parked at the parking lot. About 25 of these trucks mounted AA machine guns. *

10. On 31 March 1952, the Dusterwinkel-Bruecke bataiment on the south bank of the Hohenzollern Canal was occupied by a unit wearing black-bordered black epaulets with engineer insignia. There was no activity and only a few soldiers were seen in the bataiment. Truck [redacted] occupied by 1 officer and 1 EM wearing black-bordered black epaulets with engineer insignia and carrying a pneumatic boat drove on Britzer Strasse toward the camp. ***

* [redacted] Comment. There are no essential changes regarding the installations mentioned in para para 2 of the present report since the last information [redacted]

The 160-mm mortars seen at the Seinetzen Kaserne were not previously reported.

25X1

As the headquarters and army troops of the Fourth Gds Ndz Army are stationed in that installation and as, according to T/P, the army has no mortars, it is probable that source was mistaken. Possibly a mortar regiment not belonging to the installation was temporarily staying there. Except for Obukhov (fmu), who is carried as lieutenant general and commanding general of the Fourth Gds Ndz Army until late March 1952, all officers mentioned are unknown.

 [redacted] Comment. The Dusterwinkel-Bruecke bataiment is occupied by army engineers of the Fourth Gds Ndz Army. [redacted]

25X1

Only a few soldiers were in the bataiment because the unit had moved to Altruppin in late February 1952 to participate in practices at Neumuehler Schleuse which were still under way in mid-March 1952. [redacted]
